New president calls on University to create

The Reverend Peter M. Donohue, O.S.A., was inaugurated as the 32nd president of Villanova University on September 8th. The inauguration ceremony took place in the University's Pavilion and was open to the entire Villanova community.

Crystal J. Lucky, Ph.D., associate professor of English and director of Africana Studies, acted as the master of ceremonies. Delegates from more than 100 universities from across the country were present to show their support and offer their congratulations, including Scott Lurding, an alumnus from the oldest institution of higher learning in the United States, Harvard University. The presidents from several local colleges such as St. Joseph's University, Drexel University, University of Pennsylvania, LaSalle University, Rosemont College, Cabrini College and Immaculata University, were also in attendance.

Rev. Peter M. Donohue, O.S.A., addresses the Villanova community during the Inauguration Ceremony

The invocation was given by His Eminence Justin Cardinal Rigali, J.C.D., archbishop of Philadelphia. Speakers included John R. Johannes, Ph.D., vice president for Academic Affairs; President Richard J. Santagati, Merrimack College; President Michael J. McGinniss, F.S.C., La Salle University; and President Amy Gutmann, Ph.D., University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Gutmann paid homage to Father Donohue's previous position as chair of the theatre department, which he held until June 2006, by citing lines from the musical "Chicago" in her speech. In 2002, Father Donohue became the first Augustinian priest to win a Barrymore Award, the Harold Prince Award for Outstanding Direction of a Musical, for "Chicago."

Representatives of the University students, parents, alumni, staff and faculty presented gifts of St. Augustine's works to Father Donohue and offered congratulations, noting how he has touched their lives. Dr. Lucky's gift to the new president was her a cappella rendition of "Amazing Grace."

The culmination of the afternoon's ceremonies was the inaugural address by Father Donohue. He began his address with a dramatic reading of the two creation stories found in the Bible. He said the first creation story is dramatic and portrays God as a majestic presence who created order out of chaos. Instead, Father Donohue said the University will be guided

Director, Part-Time Studies

From the Director

A new semester is under way and I wish our new students and returning students a sincere welcome to the 2006-2007 school year. Around Vasey Hall things are still in a state of disarray from the construction of the new elevator that has been added to the building. It will be a great asset once completed and permit those with physical limitations to attend classes on the second floor of Vasey. In the meantime, please bear with the dust and dirt in our hallways.

If you wish to add to your course schedule for the fall semester, remember that the second FastForward group of classes start on October 19th or October 23rd and you may register for these classes anytime prior to the start of class. By taking two FastForward classes and one regular 14-week class each semester, you can accelerate your progress through your degree and still be working on no more than two courses at any time.

The Part-Time Studies division has recently received approval to commence a joint bachelor's/ master's degree program with the Graduate School of Liberal Arts and Sciences in the area of human resource development. Designed for those students who work in human resources or wish to work in that field, the program permits students in the Bachelor of Interdisciplinary Studies, general studies or leadership studies majors, to apply for the master's in human resource development in the senior year of their undergraduate program. If accepted, the student takes three graduate level courses in HRD while in their senior year. These courses count toward the bachelor's degree requirements and later count toward the master's program requirements (assuming B grades and a 3.00 GPA are maintained). For more information on this combined bachelor's/master's degree program see our Web site or contact your academic advisor. More information on this new program will be promulgated as the details are finalized. ■

BIS IS UPDATE

Data are all the little facts that surround us every day. Your cell phone number, birth date and home address are all bits of data that when combined and managed properly become very valuable information. We all know people making money over the distribution of our personal information!

With the onset of computers, the management of data to information is everywhere. When we check out at the super market, our selections are used to profile us and help the store to make restocking requests, determine the next sales promotion, drive targeted marketing campaigns, and even provide us with coupons for the next visit. Every day, people are working hard to support, manage and ensure the dissemination of information.

Information is knowledge. Therefore, the knowledge of how to manage information is invaluable. Villanova University provides opportunities for you to gain this knowledge and acquire a minor or certificate in information systems. Either of these options will provide you with better career growth opportunities as well as the confidence to work in today's information world.

In addition to the Bachelor of Interdisciplinary Studies degree in information systems Villanova offers a minor that is designed to allow you to acquire information technology knowledge and skills through a broad selection of coursework. To complete a minor in information systems requires successful completion of 16 credits/5 courses:

- CSC1051 - Algorithms & Data Structures I
- MIS2030 - Database Management
- MIS2040 - Systems Analysis & Design
- 2 Information Systems Electives

A certificate in information systems has an additional course requirement for a total of 19 credits/6 courses. A certificate requires that you also take CSC1020 - Computing & The Web. A certificate in information systems provides an educational opportunity for securing a career in today's information age and networked economy. It is open to both undergraduate and post-graduate students.

Increase your confidence, and generate additional opportunities by adding a minor or a certificate in information systems to your résumé! Start with one class and see if the minor or certificate is right for you.

2006 Alpha Sigma Lambda and Medallion Awards

On May 5, 2006 a dinner and awards ceremony were held on campus to recognize and induct Part-Time Studies students into Alpha Sigma Lambda, the premier national honor society for adult students in higher education. Alpha Sigma Lambda is dedicated to the advancement of scholarship and recognizes high scholastic achievement in an adult student's career. Also presented that evening were the Medallion Awards to those Part-Time Studies students who have achieved the highest cumulative average in their respective academic disciplines.

This annual gala spring event includes a celebratory cocktail hour which is followed by a three-course dinner, the awards and induction ceremony with a guest speaker. The attendance and participation of past inductees, families, friends and an assortment of Villanova personnel all contribute to make the evening a uniquely joyous occasion.

CAREER CORNER

The Twenty-first Century Job Hunt

Scouring the want ads looking for the elusive dream job may be a thing of the past, but in many ways, employment Web sites are not that different from their newspaper predecessors. Using the Internet to search for jobs can be more convenient because of the technological advancements that these sites utilize. However, job-seekers must realize that easier searching capabilities do not necessarily make hunting for that dream job as effortless as logging on.

Two of the most popular Web sites for job-seekers are Monster.com and CareerBuilder.com. Monster.com may get more publicity, but both sites are good places to search. In fact, it would be wise to sign up with both sites in order to see what jobs are available because while there are often overlaps in the job listings, it is more beneficial to have a wider search range to snag that job.

Monster.com and CareerBuilder.com both allow job-seekers to post their résumés to the site. This feature allows employers to search for employees and recruit them, a welcome role-reversal. When potential employees post their resumes on CareerBuilder.com, the site uses their "Job Recommendation Engine," which remembers searches, scans resumes and collects details from previous job applications to recommend other potential jobs. Both also offer job-seekers the option to receive e-mail updates on new job listings that fit their specified criteria. Search options are similar on both sites as well, narrowing job listings by location, compensation, industry, degree requirements and more. Visitors to these sites can even sort their search results by the date posted so they can be sure they are viewing the most recent postings.

In addition to the job listings posted on these sites, both offer a variety of resources, such as resume help, salary comparisons, interview tips and self-assessment tools. While these can be very helpful once job-seekers have landed an interview, they can also be distracting as Web-surfers may start clicking compulsively and forget that they should be looking for a job, not comparing CEO salaries.

One important thing to note is in the Philadelphia market, CareerBuilder.com has been replaced by Monster.com as the employment Web site partner of Philadelphia's largest newspaper group, the Philadelphia Inquirer and the Daily News.

The Internet is a valuable tool when searching for employment and these two sites try their best to make the job hunt as painless as possible. However, even with all of their tips and tricks, job-seekers still need perseverance and determination to sort through the offerings, apply and wait for that golden offer.

“STUDENT SPOTLIGHT”

Thomas DePasquale
Bachelor of Interdisciplinary Studies in General Studies '06
Entrepreneur

Thomas DePasquale first began his Villanova career in 1977, as an engineering major. After switching to the former College of Commerce and Finance, now the Villanova School of Business, one year later he left Villanova to open an auto repair shop.

DePasquale admits that back in 1977, he applied to Villanova simply because his high school guidance counselor expressed doubts regarding his ability to be accepted at Villanova. So, he applied and attended just to prove that counselor wrong. He was really unsure about what he wanted to do and where he wanted to take his life, so he dropped out in order to pursue other interests.

In the years that followed DePasquale met and married his wife Linda, had three children, Tommy, Dawn and Michael, converted his auto shop into a self-service carwash and coin laundry, and purchased a Franchise in the Jackson Hewitt Income Tax Service. This Franchise has expanded into 15 locations locally where he resides in Wayne, NJ.

DePasquale decided to return to Villanova in 2004 to complete his degree after his son Michael, who will graduate in spring of 2007 with a degree in engineering, challenged him to return to the classroom with him to complete his degree. “We would joke around about me coming back to Villanova and graduating with him like in the Rodney Dangerfield movie, “Back to School,” said DePasquale.

After his son Michael came home with his transcripts from 1979 and an application to the Part-Time Studies program, DePasquale found himself back in the classroom at Villanova 26 years later. Although he admits that it was difficult at first, he believes that coming back to Villanova in this new technological age has benefited him greatly. When he first returned to school he could not look up a book in the library without the paper card catalogue. Now DePasquale is familiar with programs like Excel and Powerpoint and readily uses J-store to look up articles online.

DePasquale recently completed his Bachelor’s of Interdisciplinary Studies and is now taking courses in the field of communication. He hopes to work toward earning his master’s degree in strategic communication and eventually go on to teaching. DePasquale has heard that life begins at 50 and he is sure this is true for his life.

FROM YOUR UNIVERSITY SENATE REPRESENTATIVE

“Set love as the criterion for all you say, and whatever you teach, teach in such a way that the person to whom you speak, by hearing may believe, by believing, hope, and by hoping love (St. Augustine).”

I once saw this quote from St. Augustine on the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences welcoming Web page. I am not even sure if it is still there. I remember writing it down in one of my textbooks. I found myself looking for this quote last week as I was reading an article in The Villanovan about the inauguration of Peter M. Donohue, O.S.A. as Villanova’s 32nd president.

In the article, I noted two quotes from Father Donohue:

“We will never achieve new levels of understanding if we are only with people who think, act and believe what we do.”

“Education is the breath of life that enables us to discover our potential and move in new directions.”

Together, these three quotes made me think about being a student in Villanova’s College of Part-Time and Continuing Studies. I think that I speak for all the Part-Time and Continuing Studies students in saying that we are very fortunate to be involved with this University. Villanova offers a highly valued and respected educational curriculum that is founded on Augustinian moral values. Our school’s motto is “Veritas, Unitas, Caritas,” (Truth, Unity, Love).

In the hustle and bustle of my life—work, school, family—I tend to forget that I am not only acquiring knowledge during my time here at Villanova, I am also being changed for the better. I suggest that we look at Villanova in a different light. Not only can this school provide us with the requisite skills to get higher-paying jobs, it can also afford us the opportunity to grow internally. My hope is that when graduation day comes and we all leave Villanova for our destinies, our hearts and souls have been transformed, and we find ourselves better individuals than when we entered.

On March 17th, the University Senate held their second meeting of the Spring 2006 semester. The Senate heard reports on three University Committees: the Committee on Faculty, the Mission and Social Justice Committee and the Athletic Advisory Committee. An interesting point of note is that the Mission and Social Justice Committee is working with the administration on defining socially responsible criteria for the investing of University Endowment funds.

The third meeting of the University Senate’s Spring 2006 semester took place on April 21st. The guest speaker was Mr. Vince Nicastro, Athletic Director at Villanova. Mr. Nicastro updated the Senate on the various initiatives being developed by the Athletic Department. Although there were many interesting points made by Mr. Nicastro, the one that stood out for me was the academic success that Villanova athletes achieve. The graduation success rate for all Villanova athletes is 95% and the average GPA is 3.083. These numbers are quite impressive.

On September 15th, the University Senate held its first meeting. This meeting served as a social opportunity for everyone to meet the new senators. See the spring issue of NiteLine for more information.

I hope that everyone has a chance to experience all the learning avenues present at Villanova.

Richard Cullen,
University Senate Representative

THE MANY USES OF THE WILDCARD

One of the more important items that every Villanovan has is their student ID, or their "Wildcard." The Wildcard has many practical uses on campus, like providing access to the Falvey Library, the computer centers and other buildings. The computers that are located throughout campus and in the lounges in the Connelly Center require a Wildcard in order to log on. The Wildcard can also be used in copy machines and vending machines located on campus. Probably one of the greatest advantages to using your Wildcard is that you as a student receive a 5% discount on any purchase made at the University Shop including text books.

In addition, the Wildcard can be used at many locations off campus. Some of these locations include CVS in Rosemont and in Wayne, Peace of Pizza, Fresh Grocer (the new organic supermarket located in Villanova), Campus Corner, Genuardi's in Radnor, Golden Image salon and tanning, the Villanova Shell station and many more. For a complete listing visit the Wildcard website at

<http://services.jsatech.com/index.php?cid=29&>

You can manage your Wildcard account online or you can visit the Wildcard Office located in Dougherty Hall during normal business hours. The office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. ■

FOCUS ON FACULTY: MOIRA MCCOLE

Seven years ago, Moira McCole, an English department adjunct, readily volunteered to teach Villanova's experimental FastForward classes, and she has been on that schedule ever since. In fact, McCole's pioneering efforts and class design had the UNIT department modeling her WebCT classes for other professors eager to use the new technology.

The FastForward's hectic pace and sometimes long breaks actually offered her family hidden blessings. Each time a break came between teaching a FastForward from August until early October (FF1) then a FastForward from January until mid-March (FF3), some unexpected family event occurred. One October her sister married; another October a relative passed away. In each case, her dedication was never split between students and family. The most remarkable blessing occurred in March 2001 when McCole's son needed a kidney transplant. Coincidentally, not scheduled for the March to May (FF4) session, she was able to devote her attention to preparation for two major operations: her son's and her own. McCole donated her kidney to her son, giving him a second chance at life.

Indeed, McCole, who has taught for more than 20 years at Villanova, finds the very subject she teaches, American literature, an exploration of life's relationships. To her, the discovery, crafting and expression of ideas about ourselves and others is a rewarding way to spend seven weeks.

A graduate of Villanova's undergraduate and graduate English programs, McCole spent years in the business world writing technical manuals for Burroughs Corp. and teaching business writing at Shared Medical Systems (SMS). She also taught in the English departments of St. Basil Academy and Cabrini College, and has published articles in the Philadelphia Inquirer and Main Line Times.

Her current FastForward class covers major American writers (ENG 4002-100). Previous offerings included American contributions to the modern short story and American literature before and after World War II. ■

Wendy Mercado, Linda Morrison, Miranda O'Keefe, Lisa Powers, Linda Pugliese, Carol Scheifele, Whitney Szmodis and Katherine Washburn.

The Medallion Award recipients were: Therese Byrne, Bachelor of Science in accountancy, Rosemary Colleluori, Bachelor of Interdisciplinary Studies in general studies, and Edward Funk, Jr., Bachelor of Science in business administration.

Dr. Robert D. Stokes, assistant vice president for Academic Affairs, Part-Time and Continuing Studies, gave the keynote address.

Mu Chapter, the Villanova University Chapter of Alpha Sigma Lambda National Honor Society, was installed at Villanova on February 6, 1958. This year marked the forth-ninth anniversary of that installation and was also the twenty-fifth anniversary of the medallion ceremony.

Part-Time Studies extends congratulations to all the inductees and award recipients and looks forward to continuing this proud tradition which so beautifully reflects the outstanding contributions our students have made over the years to the University community.

ALUMNI PROFILE: ED CAPIELLO '06

Ed Capiello

Bachelor of Interdisciplinary Studies in Information Systems

"Don't kid yourself, non-traditional students don't go back to school just to advance their careers or because their families pushed them into it. They go back due to intellectual curiosity and a need for self-actualization. All other reasons are secondary," says Ed Capiello, a recent graduate of Villanova's Part-Time Studies Program. He goes on to say that, "Unlike many traditional students, non-traditional students have developed an appreciation for learning and desire the sense of accomplishment that they missed out on when they were younger. They are grateful to get a second chance at fulfilling their educational aspirations and typically endure many personal sacrifices, making their commitment to education that much more difficult and impressive. Just as George Bernard Shaw said, 'Youth is wasted on the young.' Maybe the same can be said for a good education."

After transferring to Villanova from New York University in 2004, Edward V. Capiello graduated magna cum laude, in May 2006 from Villanova University's Part-Time Studies Program, with a Bachelor of Interdisciplinary Studies in information systems. Capiello wanted to expedite his studies and complete his bachelor's degree in two years. To facilitate this, the flexibility of program allowed him to take classes during the day, in the evening, on weekends and across all colleges in order to fulfill his unique requirements. Though he was an undergraduate, Villanova's administration accommodated his special scheduling requirements and allowed him to take graduate level courses when no undergraduate level courses were available to fulfill his program.

As a young man Capiello felt it was his duty to enter into the service of his country and joined the U.S. Marine Corps at the age of 17 after graduating from high school. His career plans for the military were cut short by an injury sustained while on active duty. After his honorable discharge from the Marine Corps, he found himself jobless and with no skills compatible with the current workforce. He attended trade school at the Virginia based Electronic Computer Programming Institute where he graduated with honors and a diploma in computer technology II and entered the technology field. He began with a small systems integrator and worked his way up to Head of Technology for the Americas region at a prestigious global investment management firm.

Though he had attained a certain level of achievement in his career by age 35 without the benefit of a four-year degree, his family had instilled in him a deeper value for education that was still unfulfilled. With this in mind, as well as career advancement opportunities, that he committed to continue his formal education. After making education a priority in his life, Capiello moved to the Villanova area in March 2004 and commuted back-and-forth to New York City to finish his associate's in applied science in business at NYU. Capiello then transferred as many credits as possible to Villanova's Bachelor of Interdisciplinary Studies in information systems and began classes in June of 2004.

During his time at Villanova, Capiello made the dean's list frequently, he was invited and joined Villanova's Mu Chapter of Alpha Sigma Lambda, the premier National Honor Society for adult students in higher education and a member of the Part-Time Studies Student Advisory Board. Capiello also received a partial scholarship under the Villanova Computing Scholars program which is administered by Villanova's department of computing sciences and funded by a grant from the National Science Foundation.

Transferring from another school has given Capiello the opportunity to compare and contrast the Villanova community to that of NYU. Although NYU is a good school, Capiello strongly believes that he received a far better educational experience at Villanova. From the knowledgeable and experienced faculty to the professional, helpful, and friendly administration, Capiello always felt like his educational needs were their priority. From his first contact with Kathy Cook who set up his admissions interview with James Johnson, director of Part-Studies, to the presentation of his final paper on Library Online Public Access Catalog User Interfaces in front of a group of part-time studies staff and professors, Capiello feels that all personnel he came in contact with seemed to take an active interest in enhancing the learning experience and sense of community that Villanova is known for.

Capiello would also like to extend special thanks to his advisor, Sue McFarland-Metzger for working diligently to keep him on track and always making him feel as though he were her priority. He also wishes to thank all of his professors who are clearly committed to upholding the highest educational standards that a University can offer and making his educational experience all that it could be, especially Ellen Bonds, Ph.D., William Fleischman, Ph.D., William Wagner, Ph.D. and Timothy Horner, Ph.D.

After graduation Ed took the summer off and is now seeking new opportunities in the information technology. Once settled he will most assuredly return to Villanova to continue his post-graduate studies. Originally he had planned on pursuing an M.B.A., but has now expanded his scope to include a master's degree in finance or philosophy. In the meantime he continues as an active member of the St. Thomas of Villanova parish and is studying to be a catechist under Dr. Ernest Sherretta (an adjunct professor at Villanova University) in preparation for teaching parish religious education classes in the fall.

Villanova Paralegal Program has a New Home

Villanova's paralegal program recently changed its location from Villanova University's main campus to Hubner Hall located on the campus of American College in Bryn Mawr, Pa. This new location offers students additional amenities and more space for the program. For more information on the full-time or part-time paralegal program visit www.constudies.villanova.edu. ■

Love Blossoms in Villanova's Paralegal Course

Brandon Brigham and Rebecca Seitz enrolled at Villanova University in May of 2004 to earn their paralegal certificates in the full-time paralegal program offered through the Office of Continuing Studies. What they did not realize is not only would they earn a paralegal certificate, but also a relationship that would last a lifetime.

Their relationship began over lunch. They used to eat together everyday while in the program and they continued their relationship well after they completed the program despite the 45-minute commute that separated them after they both began working.

One year later in October of 2005, Brandon and Rebecca were engaged, and they tied the knot this June in Harelysville, Pa.

The couple now lives in Wayne, Pa. Brandon loved the field of law so much that he is currently seeking a law degree from Villanova. He is greatly interested in tax law and is considering earning a M.B.A as well as his J.D. He is expected to graduate in 2009. Rebecca currently works for Henkels and McCoy in Plymouth Meeting, Pa., as a corporate paralegal.

On behalf of the Villanova community, we wish Rebecca and Brandon congratulations and much happiness! Go Wildcats! ■ by the second story from the book of Genesis that portrays God as a sculptor who created life by his breath and embrace. This story should serve as the focus to execute the University's mission; that is, to continue the process of creation by the way the Villanova community shapes and molds one another.

Father Donohue continued his speech by highlighting the University's motto, "Veritas, Unitas, Caritas," which also served as the theme of the inauguration ceremonies. The values of truth, unity and love served as the principles that guided St. Augustine and act as the foundation of Villanova's mission. Father Donohue said that Villanova needs to search out the truth in all disciplines and emphasize a holistic approach in order to form the total person. The center of the University needs to be an intellectual center. Villanova prides itself as a liberal arts institution of learning, Father Donohue said, and the University must never renounce the liberal part or the arts.

Father Donohue was emphatic that the University must renounce its nickname that refers to the alleged homogeneity of the student population. Villanovans should see themselves as an immigrant population from a variety of families, places and experiences who have come together to build a new home and unite in a culture of giving.

Love must be the driving force behind the University's actions, said Father Donohue. His wish for Villanova is to simply be Villanova. The University knows what it does well and it must strive to do it better. He asked members of the Villanova community to share their souls with others. Father Donohue concluded his address with a call to the University to share in his vision—to create.

Each component of the inauguration celebration carried out the principles of "Veritas, Unitas, Caritas" by uniting the members of the University's Catholic and Augustinian community in celebration, shared dialogue and service to others. The festivities included a presidential reception for the faculty and staff, a student ball, an Academic Symposium on the Responsibilities of the Catholic University in the 21st century, a reception at the Philadelphia Museum of Art, a liturgy, a dinner following the inauguration ceremony, and a day of service on September 9th, instituted at Father Donohue's request.

The webcast of the inauguration ceremony can be accessed at www.villanova.edu/homepage/president/inauguration/webcast.htm.
